Hi Susan,

That sounds like an excellent plan. I'd be happy to set up the informal meeting amongst this small group, and I'm happy to coordinate schedules. Would the next week or two work for you?

We don't have a firm date yet for publication, though from the editor's email, it seems likely in the next few weeks. We'd be glad to let you know when we hear more.

We really appreciate the chance to talk further with you!

Thanks,
Brendan

Hi Dawn, thank you for reintroducing us. We would be happy to continue collaborations into this area. Do you have a firm date on when the paper is expected to publish?

Brendan, I think a good first step would be for us to have an informal conversation about how CDC sees EPA responding to this issue. We can fill you in on our regulatory responsibilities and hear any potential steps that CDC thinks could be helpful.

At some point, it would be good for us to hold a fairly large meeting between the two agencies so that our scientists and managers have a chance to learn about the problem, impact on human health, and the human/ag interface. Lots of time for questions, answers and discussion.

Does this approach make sense to you? When would you like to have the informal meeting? I can check with Jay Garland to see if he would like to attend as well.

Thanks,

Subject: Reintroductions to Connect for Triazole Fungicide Use Discussions

Hi Susan,

I hope all is well with you. I know that you already know Tom Chiller and Brendan Jackson, who lead our mycotics work here at the CDC. I wanted to use this email as a reconnecting opportunity, since the CDC triazole fungicide use paper, which you had the chance to review, will be published soon. We are interested in opening a dialogue with you and team around triazole fungicide use on crops/plants, to gain an understanding of your/EPA current thoughts on use of these pesticides and any plans for risk assessment from an AR perspective.

Brendan will be the main CDC point of contact for arrangement of these discussions, to ensure all the right CDC folks are included.

We hope that you will be interested to connect on this important topic, and with the potential to collaborate on addressing this critical AR issue.

Thank you,
Dawn
